Click Here To Download -Q: How to add contents of cell in DataGridView I want to add the contents of a cell in my DataGridView to a string. Example: DataGridViewCell[1, 1] = "Mary" I want to add this value to a string string s = "FirstName=Mary,LastName=Smith"; I know I can use the DataGridView.GetValue(columnName) method, but I want to know if there is a better way to do this? A: Using reflection to convert the DataGridViewCell to the appropriate type is the only way. Although, there is a quicker way that uses the DataGridView's EvaluateAsString method: dataGridView1.Rows[rowNumber].Cells[columnNumber].Value.ToString() You need to get the cell's DataValue and then convert it to a string; string name = dataGridView1.Rows[0].Cells[1].Value.ToString(); Q: The absolute value of the quadratic form  $x^2+ly^2-z^2$  with  $l \in \mathbb{R}$ . I was wondering what is the absolute value of this quadratic form? I know what the absolute value of a quadratic form is, but I am not sure how to calculate the absolute value of  $x^2+ly^2-z^2$ . I know that the absolute value is  $\sqrt{x^2+y^2+z^2}$  but since the  $x$ 's,  $y$ 's and  $z$ 's are real I can't figure out how to square each of them separately. It's easier to calculate  $x^2+ly^2-z^2$ . The absolute value of  $x^2+y^2z^2$  is clearly  $\sqrt{x^2+y^2z^2}$ , so  $|x|$
