Abu Dhabi (FAD) – Protests erupted in Abu Dhabi on Saturday as hundreds of people blocked main roads and streets in the capital city, protesting against an increase in electricity prices. The move comes a day after an announcement from the United Arab Emirates’ de facto ruler, Crown Prince Sheikh Mohammed bin Zayed, that the government will not increase electricity tariffs for the eighth time this year. According to an official with the Abu Dhabi Electricity and Water Authority (DEWA), the utility plans to raise electricity tariffs by 4.9 percent. “The increase in the electricity rates is planned for October 15, 2018 and has been implemented to cover the additional cost in the production of electricity,” DEWA said in a statement. “It is an automatic increase, which applies to all residential, commercial and industrial consumers,” it said. A protest on Friday in Abu Dhabi turned violent and saw hundreds of people block streets. “DEWA has tried to impose an amount of Dh20 per month to Abu Dhabi residents without having any explanation for the move,” Waleed Al Qadi, a resident of Abu Dhabi, said at the protest. “We’re not happy with this decision. It affects the living standards of the residents.” Alessandro Renzi, Italian Ambassador to the UAE, tweeted a warning against what he said was an “attack” on the residents’ “dignity and wellbeing.” “Abu Dhabi has a reputation of being a soft and moderate state. These attacks on basic rights will certainly start a process of polarization which will make our countries more distant,” he said. Abu Dhabi residents have been protesting against the rising costs of
