I have read a text which says: "If x is any number $a \leq x \leq b$, then x is contained in the interval (a,b)." The author has taken the form x to be the interval (a,b) and the statement $a \leq x \leq b$ to be its property. But, why did he not say like: If x is an interval (a,b), then x is contained in (a,b) (which is also the same thing he has written)? A: You could say "If x is an interval (a,b), then x is contained in (a,b)." That's true, but it doesn't help you much because knowing x is an interval is already part of the information you are asking about. If you could choose x from the interval (a,b) then there would be no reason to write it down as x and then rewrite it as (a,b) as well. 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an image processing apparatus for receiving image data from an external image processing apparatus such as a scanner, a facsimile machine, a printer or the like. 2. Description of the Related Art An image processing apparatus disclosed in, for example, Japanese Laid-Open Publication No. 63-27409(A) has been used for the purpose of obtaining image data
