The Photoshop Design/Graphics Portfolio is also a good resource to learn from. Learn more at this link. This article will walk through how to edit a file to do basic changes such as cropping and adjusting the color of the image. It also shows how to use some of Photoshop's tools to make basic adjustments to the edges of a picture. 1. Make changes to the HUE/CONTRAST The HUE/CONTRAST settings are used to adjust the color on a grayscale, or black and white image. Convert a grayscale image to RGB channels First, you need to convert your black and white image to a RGB image. This lets you edit each channel individually. Step 1 Open up the image you want to edit in Photoshop. Click the Edit > Convert to RGB Color Channel step to open this window. Step 2 Click the OK button. Step 3 Now you can edit each of the different channels using Photoshop's tools. There are three main channels, red, green, and blue, and each one controls one of the three color channels. If you know how to work with the Levels tool, you will already be familiar with these settings. If you have used GIMP, you will be more accustomed to the G-Thang tool for hues and contrast. One thing to note is that you can only adjust one channel at a time. 2. Adjust the BRIGHTNESS and CONTRAST Using the Brightness and Contrast settings will allow you to change the overall brightness and contrast of the image. It will also change the way the colors of an image react. The levels (shown above) control the overall brightness and contrast of the image. You can change the overall brightness and contrast of the image and how the color reacts to brightness and contrast. The Adobe Brightness/Contrast settings act like the Levels tool. 3. Change the Image's COLOR Many people use this method to adjust the colors of an image, but it can be misleading. The HSL/HSL Panel Settings control the overall color balance and color and tone (how black and white) of the image. Step 1 Open the image you wish to adjust in Photoshop. Select the Hex Color Picker tool and move it around the image to find the color you want to adjust. Click the Colorize button to

Q: When should I apply an offset to a Date? What's the difference between adding an offset to a Date and subtracting an offset from the current date? Example: `var offsetDate = new Date(2014, 6, 30);` vs `var currentDate = new Date(); var offsetDate = currentDate - new Date(2014, 6, 30);` Both seem to be working fine, if I look at the date in the browser I get the same result. So when should I apply an offset to the Date? A: In general, you add an offset when you are seeking to search in the past. If you are already at the future, the time zone you're interested in will have already passed. Both of your examples are good. A: The docs for `Date.set` will provide you with a good overview: `set Date.prototype.set` The `set` method sets the time value for the `Date` object to the specified time value. Unlike `getDate()`, the `set` method is not specified by ECMAScript. If the time value is less than 0 or greater than the maximum number of milliseconds in one day, or if the time value is not an integer multiple of milliseconds, the `set` method inserts 0 and/or the number of milliseconds as specified to complete a full day. In your case, `set` is used in the same way. Calling `set` on a `Date` object with year, month and day set to 2014, 6 and 30 respectively should give you a date equivalent to 2015, 5, 30 (Gregorian) which is the 29th of June in the year 2015. Stewarts Creek (Roaring Brook tributary) Stewarts Creek is a tributary of Roaring Brook in Columbia County and Sullivan County, New York. The creek rises in the Catskill Mountains and flows south into the Village of Bog Brook in Bog Brook. The Stewarts Creek joins the Roaring Brook in the hamlet of Batavia, approximately downstream of Bog Brook. There is a Stewart Creek Wilderness Area in the Catskill Mountains, south of Rangeley Lake, which includes land owned by The Nature Conservancy. AMERICA'S LEADER: Snapshots from the president's remarks In the White House today, President Obama addressed the American economy and laid out his policy agenda for the remainder of his presidency. Office of Management and Budget Director Jacob Lew, who also worked as a White House aide under Obama, delivered remarks on the president's fiscal plans to the Economic Club of Washington. Below are some of the highlights from the president's remarks, and quotes from the presidential daily briefing. On the economy: "Underlying problems are daunting, but there is no basis for complacency ... the long-term economic challenges are real, but we face them with the strength of a growing, durable recovery – a recovery that we have strengthened since January of last year. "President Obama has taken action to open up new markets to American exports, which are vital to sustained economic growth. ... We have recovered all the jobs we lost during the worst economic crisis since the Great Depression. ... "As President Obama has said, the American economy is fundamentally strong. ... we can never go back to the old normal, but with the right policies, we can make sure that the American Dream is available to every American – that means a better future for millions of Americans in more than 900 counties across the United States." On the Dodd-Frank legislation: "And as I've said, we're going to make sure that the reforms contained in the Dodd-Frank Act are put in place. But as I said before, I believe that we can have the best of both worlds. I think that we can have real reforms, we can strengthen our financial system; we can make sure that our financial system is, in fact, sound, and yet we don't have to sacrifice any of the elements of our economy that contribute to a strong, growing American economy. "We can have both, we can have reforms that make our financial system stronger, we can have reforms that make sure that we can invest in infrastructure; we can have reforms that increase consumer protections; we can have reforms that make sure that our markets are functioning properly. That's where we've been over the last year and a half. We can have a real recovery in the American economy; that's what we've been seeing. "But the problem is
