cDNA cloning and expression of cytochrome P-450 1A1 (CYP1A1) in primary cultures of chicken granulosa cells. We have developed a technique for the direct purification of chicken granulosa cells and their primary cultures in the presence of 5alpha-dihydrotestosterone. Cytochrome P-450 (CYP)-specific substrates such as 7-ethoxyresorufin, 7-pentoxresorufin, 7-methoxyresorufin and 7-benzyloxyresorufin and metabolism of xenobiotics such as 7-ethoxycoumarin were used to demonstrate that these cells contained CYP450 proteins with close homology to mammalian CYP1A1. Using RT-PCR, a cDNA clone was isolated from a granulosa cell preparation containing aromatase and 5alpha-reductase mRNA. Nucleotide and deduced amino acid sequences indicate that this clone represents the chicken homologue of the mouse cDNA reported to be the CYP1A1. The expression of CYP1A1 mRNA has been confirmed by Northern hybridization analysis. The CYP1A1 was purified from cell homogenates using affinity chromatography and anion exchange high performance liquid chromatography. These results show that chicken granulosa cells are a rich source of CYP1A1 and may be a useful source of these CYP1A1 proteins in the study of steroidogenesis.1. Field of the Invention The present invention generally relates to apparatus and methods for use in making toner for electrophotographic imaging systems, and more particularly to corona charging devices for delivering a charge to toner during the mixing process. 2. Description of the Related Art Electrophotographic reproduction devices such as color copiers and laser printers typically employ a photosensitive member to create an electrostatic latent image of an original. The latent image is developed with dry, solid toner particles which adhere to the charged areas of the photosensitive member to form a toner image. Next, the toner image is transferred from the photosensitive member to a copy sheet and is heated to permanently fuse the image onto the copy sheet. The copy sheet bearing the toner image is then directed to a fuser which permanently fuses the toner image onto the copy sheet by applying heat and pressure to the copy sheet. Typically, the toner image is transferred to the copy sheet

What's New in the?

It's no secret that the Samsung Galaxy S10 smartphone line up has been subject to some serious leaks and rumors. A new rumor claims that Samsung will indeed create three flagship smartphones for the year 2020: one cheaper model, one "normal" sized model and one larger phone with a "modern" display, with the two former phones codenamed SM-A100/SM-A200 and the latter codenamed SM-A500. All of them will be announced at Samsung's press conference in New York in less than a month. Despite the leaked information being mostly about specs and design, it is not known when exactly Samsung will announce the devices. As soon as it does, we'll be sure to update you with all the details right here. In the meantime, keep your eyes on Samsung's official website for information, which is already live. Other than the fact that the Galaxy S10 will have three sizes, there will likely be no other big differences in specs. As with the first Galaxy S smartphones and Galaxy Note series, the S10 will likely come with a notch display, dual rear cameras, an in-display fingerprint scanner and the new "Super Speed" wireless charging. One of the phones will feature Samsung's in-display fingerprint scanner, something that is expected to be the new standard feature on flagship devices. In a recent video, Patently Apple reports that Samsung is preparing a refresh of the Galaxy S10 lineup, which is exactly what the leaks are suggesting. Samsung will likely update the Galaxy S10 lineup to include better cameras, better displays, better specs and more. The Galaxy S10 will be announced on February 20 in New York.
