Determination of free and conjugated serum bilirubin in infants by a new potentiometric method. The present study describes a new potentiometric procedure for the determination of free and conjugated bilirubin in serum of infants by using a single transducer. The procedure was successfully applied in the case of free bilirubin in 39 infants who required intensive phototherapy or exchange transfusion. On the other hand, the single potentiometric method seems to be less suitable for the determination of conjugated bilirubin, due to the overlapping of both peaks, but bilirubin oxidase enzyme technique and diazotation method may be used for routine determination. Do you have any issues with the solution? We have tested our solution on our local networks and are 100% confident in its stability. I do however recommend
