#1. Skype is the world's leading cloud-based communications tool that offers free calling, instant messages, video calls, whiteboard and more. After evaluating a bunch of other software, I found Skype to be the best replacement for Yahoo Instant Messenger and iChat. Skype is owned by eBay and the main developer is Janus Friis who was the CEO of Skype and FastClick before. Skype is an alternative to desktop instant messaging clients like MSN Messenger, Yahoo Messenger and Google Talk. Skype works on any computer or device that has an Internet connection (desktop, laptop, tablet, smartphone). It doesn't matter if your computer runs Windows, Mac OS, Linux or an iPhone, iPad, Android phone or tablet. Skype is available for all of them. Skype is completely free to use with no registration or signup required and the service has been completely free since 2011. You can make unlimited calls to landlines and mobile phones in 200 countries for free. The standard plan you can get for free is 200 minutes of calls per month. You can create and manage your own Skype contacts (phone numbers and email addresses) and access them on Skype.com. You can share files with a Skype address, even if they're not stored in the cloud. Skype can connect to your email, which means you don't need to get a Skype account just to communicate with other Skype users. You can use Skype even if you only have a phone number and not an email address. When you use Skype, your calling and instant messaging information is completely confidential. Skype doesn't record your calls or store your messages even if you choose to use either Google Talk or Outlook.com. Skype encryption ensures that your information is confidential even if it's stored in the cloud. Skype works with the latest version of Windows XP, Vista, 7 or 8 and Mac OSX, Windows 8 or 10. Video calling is possible on all of them, but Windows 8 or Mac OSX users need to download the Skype Beta version since the Desktop app has several limitations. ## System Requirements:

To be clear, Blade & Soul's requirements for the Battle for Azeroth beta is fairly low. Unless you have a beastly rig with a GTX 1080 or Titan X, you should be able to get the beta without any issues. If you have been playing Dark Souls 3 on PC and haven't been playing for more than a year, you should also be fine. If you haven't played the game at all, you can still jump in now. We would suggest that you use the Dark Souls 3 guide for patch 1.12 if you are unsure.
