Easy Weighbridge is a complex application designed to help you manage raw weight data obtained from specialized weighing equipment and store this information in an organized database. For purposes of discussion the machine is a 500-tonne static mass scale and the device I'm weighing is a 1kW electronic pulley dynamometer mounted on an X-Y platform that can move in both directions. I've been in contact with both the company making the dynamometer, and also the company that is selling the scale, in order to get information. This software has only been in production for a few years and as far as I've been able to find out it's only been sold by just two companies. The software is not open source, and I can't be 100% sure that all the features are included, though obviously they have to be for something to be commercial. It's fair to say the software works and seems to be reliable as far as I can tell. The software features include: Record pressure, sensor and temperature data for each reading along with a timestamp A log file can be generated with the data from the raw data The raw data log can be browsed through using a graph, each raw data log entry includes the weight, timestamp, pressure, temperature and sensor type Audio and video can be recorded along with raw data. Video can be viewed with the raw data logged There is also a graphing function which can graph the time and weight of the log file There is a log file where you can generate a BOM to analyze the raw data in the log file The software can produce a graph with the raw data and press, sensor and temperature data. There is also a raw data log if it is to be printed out There are also a number of features in relation to the data. Most notable are, the introduction of alerts and email reminders There is a log file and it is possible to generate a plot where one can graph the data against time If the raw data is to be printed out it is possible to automatically print the log file The entire log can be exported to Excel Once the log is exported to Excel it is possible to generate a report with a bar graph to analyze the data. The report can also include a graph with the total weight against time. Sound is used on all key actions, most notably the load and unload
