Note You can find the downloadable project files you need for this chapter at www.digitalplanetmedia.com/photoshopcs6. ## Using a Content-Aware Image-Match Tool The Content-Aware tools let you apply content-matching changes to a Photoshop image with a few simple steps. You use the type and background color of an object on a photo to fill or mask the area in the image where the object is; the tool finds the most similar color (the closest match for the color in the image), and then the resulting edited image appears as though you were there and touched up the photo. The best part is that you can change the content as many times as you like, and then the images blend seamlessly together to produce high-quality results.

Q: Importing Feature Layer from SQL Server I have a.featureLayer file on my SQL server that I would like to import into a Geoserver. I had tried the usual sql statements to load a file and got the error: ERROR 4007: The attributeValue expression is not well formed. I also tried this for those who don't use the same proprietary.featureLayer (they use the.featureLayersGDB i.e. sqlite file format): INSERT INTO gs:gdml (`serviceName`, `version`, `url`, `id`, `lang`, `title`, `nativeCRS`, `nativeSRS`, `metadata`, `schemaVersion`) VALUES ('OGC:WMS', '1.1.1', '', 'test', 'en', 'This is a test service', '', 'EPSG:4326', '') The original data in the.featureLayer file was created by the ArcMap add-in for SQL Server. Does anyone know how to work this out? A: The geoserver tiler already supports a.sld file, and the.sld is an xml document. So we can copy and paste the following into the.sld file:

What's New In?

At dawn one morning this week, a massive landslide blanketed the road near Don Juan Ecatepec, a town in Mexico. As cars began to pour in, we got out to investigate. Google Maps The cemetery at San Anton de Arteaga Hazy orange sun lit up a hillside above the town. Thick forest that blocked our view was losing its battle with the sun, blending into the light as the foreground and background of trees changed slowly. San Antonio, or San Anton, is a small community that holds a large cemetery, where many of the graves date back to the 1880s. According to people we spoke to, a massive landslide hit several hours ago and collapsed part of the mountain above the town. As we climbed, trees fell away, revealing a steep canyon with a murky brown river at the bottom. Rocks from the rock wall that lined the road were strewn across the river, and the vegetation was ragged around the edges, showing signs of life after the slide. Waves of dust rose in every direction as cars crawled over it at the speed of pebbles. As we reached the top, we realized that this area had been hit by a landslide five years ago. Everything looked the same, down to the pattern of rocks in the road. The new creek was the same shape, and we could see the cave that drains it. Plumes of smoke rose from the side of the mountain and became mountains of dust as we climbed again. The cascade of rocks that dropped from the side of the mountain was impressive. The cemetery A closer look at the cemetery The cemetery dates from 1879 and is made of large rocks that have been piled on top of each other to form walls. The cemetery can be clearly seen when looking down from above. The bodies and stones are protected by the greenery that surrounds them. Sagging trees cover the ground where many people have fallen, carrying their bodies far from the road. Arturo Uribe, a local government worker, was collecting some of the more recent bodies. He showed us a headstone he had created from bricks of asphalt. The headstone reads "The people beloved," and on each side of it, "Happiness: died of love." "I think it's a beautiful idea to say, 'This person died of love,'" says Ana Christina, a volunteer with
