Table to CSV Converter can be used [...] Hey PardoX- Thank you for the feedback. You are probably right in your assumption that it is more than likely part of the database it is taking the data from. It is only looking for things that have an Excel table style. I have been looking for something that could just convert the whole database to a csv file for exporting to excel and have not been able to find anything that could do this. Which might make you think I am crazy, but I have been playing with the idea of exporting to a file from a website using the IE Enhanced inspector, and then opening that file to load to excel. I haven't tested this yet though. Another thing I was looking into was finding a way to connect this to a .NET website. I was thinking of just connecting it via a Java applet, however I did not know where to get started with this. Maybe what I am looking for is something that can convert a website to text, and then I can open it up in excel and analyze the data. I am open to any suggestions, as I don't really know where to start with this project.

excel header and it does export data in header Database - Microsoft Access (Excel 2003, 2000) files are of type txt (plain text files) so what i have to do is open the file in notepad and convert it
